The image shows a web browser window with the address bar displaying 'localhost:3000'. The page content is a menu for 'PoCheng Chu, 208410380'. It features a grid of food items, each with an image, name, and price. The items include Buttermilk Pancakes (15.59), Diner Double (13.59), Godzilla Milkshake (6.59), Country Delight (20.99), Egg Attack (2.99), Oreo Dream (18.99), Bacon Overview (8.99), American Classic (12.99), Quarantine Buddy (13.99), and Brooke-Lark (9.99). Each item has a placeholder description: 'Lorem ipsum dolor sit amet consectetur adipiscing elit. Quam dolores iusto quas quia dignissimos ullam. E'. The browser's developer tools are open on the right, showing the console log with a JSON object representing the menu data. The JSON object is an array of objects, each representing a menu item with properties like id, title, description, price, and image. The first item in the array is the Buttermilk Pancakes.

The screenshot displays a development environment with the following components:

- File Explorer (Left): Shows the project structure for '1111-WP2_DEMO_80', including folders like 'w14', 'node_modules', 'public', 'src', and 'pages'.
- Code Editor (Center):
 - JS MenuPage_80.js: Contains a REST client for the `getMenuData_80` endpoint. The request is a GET to `https://wjviuyuwtkixlajqlpbk.supabase.co/rest/v1/menu_80? with an API key and Bearer token. The response is used to set products in the state.`
 - JS MenuPage_80.js (Terminal): Shows the rendered HTML output, including a section center, a list of menu items (each with a photo, title, price, and description), and item text.
- Terminal (Bottom): Displays the message 'webpack compiled with 1 warning'.
- Web Browser (Right): Shows the 'API' tab with the 'Read rows' section, indicating that all rows are being read from the `menu_80` table.
